

Publicado en COL·LEGI D'ARQUITECTES DE CATALUNYA (<https://arquitectes.cat>)

Home > The COAC's Historic Archive completes the cataloguing of the collection of Correa i Milà, Arquitectes

The COAC's Historic Archive completes the cataloguing of the collection of Correa i Milà, Arquitectes ^[1]

Detall de perspectiva de l'edifici Atalaya. Fons Correa-Milà, arquitectes. © Col·legi d'Arquitectes de Catalunya (COAC)

Publicado:

22 Julio 2016

The staff of the COAC's Historic Archive have catalogued the collection of documents donated by architects Federico Correa (b. 1924) and Alfonso Milà (1924-2009) to the COAC.

Federico Correa and Alfonso Milà studied architecture together before going on to work at José Antonio Coderch's studio. In 1953 they set up their own practice, Correa-Milà, and enjoyed a prolific career as architects and designers

Their joint output includes projects such as residential properties in Cadaqués in the 1950s and 1960s; the Montesa Factory (1957); the Godó i Trias Factory (1962); the Monitor building (1966); the Atalaya building (1966); the renovation project of Plaça Reial in Barcelona (1985); the Olympic Ring of Montjuïc (1984); and Casa Serra (the new headquarters of Barcelona Provincial Council 1985?1987). Highlights of their interior design work include the Olivetti stores (1968?1969), the Flash-Flash restaurant (1970) and the Furest boutiques in Barcelona (1974?1977), and they were awarded the FAD prize in 1959, 1971 and 1974.

Source URL: <https://arquitectes.cat/es/node/25613>

Links

[1] <https://arquitectes.cat/es/node/25613>